Early Management of Trauma Course (EMTC)

on 19th, 20th & 21st August 2015

Last date for registration 1st August 2015

Introduction

The outcome of trauma significantly relies on Management in the early phases of pre-hospital care and in the Emergency Department. Although consultants and trainees of specialties which deal with trauma are well versed with the theory of management, our training curriculum does not provide an opportunity to learn the synchronized and methodical approach to this common presentation at our respective Institution.

The Early Management of Trauma Course was conceptualized to address this challenge and has been tailored to keep in mind the resources and requirements of our country.

Course Highlights

- Indigenous, methodically structured training programme
- Designed to provide adequate knowledge and training in prioritisation and early management of trauma
- Comprises of lectures, scenarios and skill stations concluded by an evaluation process
- Conducted by Senior Faculty Members trained in trauma care

Unique Features of EMTC

- The course content has been specifically developed for low-income countries where resources are meagre and the demands are more
- EMTC is not a provider course. It expects trainees who have successfully completed the program to be proficient in trauma care and to be able to alter the practice of their respective Emergency Departments, in which they work
- Life-saving interventions are taught in the Anatomy Department on cadavers so that appreciation of the anatomy is ensured
- The qualifying grade is 85% individually in theory and practicals which requires focus, thus ensuring proficiency

Eligibility

- Open to all First Responders of Trauma – doctors and nurses, irrespective of specialty
- Number of delegates is restricted to 30 on a 'first-come first-serve' basis

“Spot registration is not available”
